One night late in May a tiny fragment of a distant planet miraculously finds its way into the duct work of a hospital near Princeton, New Jersey. The unearthly meteorite bounces and rolls until it drops into an open incubator temporarily holding two boys born on the same day, Eli Trenton and Thom Raritan. Unnoticed, the cosmically charged nugget lands between the newborns shoulders and permanently marks them before vaporizing. The boys go home to live their separate lives. Eli comes from a long line of athletic men. His grandfather played in the NFL and his father won an Olympic bronze medal. He longs to follow in their footsteps but his small size frustrates every attempt. This frustration causes Eli to lash-out at his schoolmates making him socially unpopular. His grades also suffer. Thoms parents are accomplished academics; but his dyslexia and ADHD make him doubt hell ever exceed scholastically. Being home schooled his parents worry their shy son isnt developing his social skills. Both boys parents decide to send them to a summer camp before they begin high school. A fourteen year old Eli and Thom arrive at Camp Shapontek in the Pine Barrens. A disastrous encounter with a bully causes Eli to be reassigned to Thoms cabin. Unaware of their cosmic past, the boys are intrigued to learn they have mirror image birthmarks on their shoulders. When they press their birthmarks together an intense reaction knocks them both unconscious. Upon awaking they discover they have been changed. Eli finally had the growth spurt he had been longing for. Thoms mind is suddenly clear and focused. Through trial and error they learn they actually attain temporarily super-powers each time they...
