EJC Consulting. Paperback. Condition: New. 134 pages. Dimensions: 7.8in. x 4.8in. x 0.5in. The workplace of today is not as hospitable to the young professional woman as we are sometimes led to believe. Power, pay, and opportunity still favor men. In addition, generational differences between baby boomers, who hold many of the managerial positions, and the entry level millennials can result in misunderstandings and conflict. What young women need to know to successfully begin their careers and advance up the career ladder is not often taught in the classroom. Instead, it is handed down from one woman to another, usually in the form of mentoring. 100 Ways to Start Smart and Get Ahead in Your Career fills a knowledge gap for millennial women. It is a collection of 100 real-world career tips for young professionals, especially those working in the nonprofit sector (although the information can be applied in any professional setting). Written in clear, straight-forward terms, the guidance found within these pages addresses everything from minor daily irritations to major career dilemmas and choices. It covers a diverse range of topics from personal branding, power differentials, and public speaking to office politics, sexism, work-life balance, and everything in between. 100 Ways to Start Smart is the result of a collaboration between an experienced CEO of a national nonprofit organization and a young professional who began working with the CEO right out of graduate school. After several years as co-workers, the authors realized how invaluable their relationship had become for both of them, and, unfortunately, how unique it was as well. They believe that one of the most important factors that contributes to a woman's career success is having other strong women for guidance, critique, and support. Many young professional women do not have a mentor that they can turn to,...
